Everybody's Picking on Arthur Burns

"I certainly am thankful to God that I am not an economist. I look back when I was a high school drop-out, I had a sort of a flair for mathematics, and I think now that if I had gone on I might have wound up being an economist. And, to me, this is a kind of a sad profession, although it is the one profession where you can gain great eminence without ever being right. And I point to Arthur Burns as a prime example of that."

—George Meany
President of the AFL-CIO in a talk before the Society of American Business Writers
